Sextape Trump : après avoir propagé la rumeur, les médias tentent de se dédouaner

11/01/2017 à 15h38

Buzzfeed accusé de propager des rumeurs sur Donald Trump et la Russie https://t.co/47GNmsu5dJ

— Le Monde (@lemondefr) January 11, 2017

Epic media fail as BuzzFeed prints unverified report on Trump for web clicks? Political agenda? https://t.co/WJek6iuIuC #DonaldTrump

— The Washington Times (@WashTimes) January 11, 2017

Comment: The 'golden rule' of journalistic ethics and why Buzzfeed was wrong to publish Trump dossier https://t.co/5dto8Z0sa8

— Press Gazette (@pressgazette) January 11, 2017

BuzzFeed's ridiculous rationale for publishing the Trump-Russia dossier https://t.co/FjphAk9rlW bvy @ErikWemple

— Washington Post Opinions (@PostOpinions) January 11, 2017

En publiant des mémos non vérifiés sur des compromissions russes de Trump, @BuzzFeed provoque une tempête éthique. https://t.co/FST9aMUyR7

— Fabrice Arfi (@fabricearfi) January 11, 2017